Solo exhibition of the 'Driftwood' relief series

My paintings come in many styles, medium and sizes.

The smallest artworks were commissioned were by Australia Post to commemorate the last series of lettercards to be published.

The largest contracts painting murals for Regional Councils and tourism resorts for long purpose built fences, wrap around buildings, dams, shelters and foyers. Each and everyone of them were unique to their respective locations having different substrates, colour treatments, technical combinations and site specific iconic themes.

In my early career, paintings on canvas were entered in art competitions, group exhibitions or art society shows sans common style, discipline or theme. I was not concerned that art academics, gallery curators and opinionated ignoramuses wanted/needed/ insisted that artists should have blinkers on to make it easy to 'brand' you into pigeonholes… fortunately, I did not get lured into that stifling rut because it only limits cross-disciplinary potential.

My modus operandi is that of being a free spirit, not having the 'signature style' expected in our staid, homogenised art world of target group arts funding or conforming to overpaid and underworked arts bureaucrats entrenched in a flawed system.

"if you cannot beat the entrenched system, do not waste your time & energy rectifying a flawed process, just part ways and do better" ~ thrive without contamination!

I have attained multiple awards in multiple disciplines in multiple fields of endeavour and I have found that this is an invigorating way to explore beyond the boundaries of other peoples expectations.
